

Opportunities for International Students and Researchers at the Institute of Czech Literature of the Czech Academy of Sciences

The Institute of Czech Literature of the Czech Academy of Sciences is encouraging international Ph.D. students and postdoctoral or senior researchers in Czech or Central European literature and culture to join our research team in Prague or Brno, Czech Republic.

Short-Term Fellowships

The Josef Dobrovský Fellowship is intended for Ph.D. students and postdoctoral researchers (usually up to 35 years of age) who are interested in Czech studies in a linguistic or geographic sense. This Czech Academy of Sciences grant enables the short-term stays of scholars for 15–45 days at one of the CAS institutes. For more information, please see: <http://www.ucl.cas.cz/en/2013-02-15-12-26-21/czech-studies-grant>.

The Zdeněk Pešat Fellowship is a funding programme of the Institute of Czech Literature of the Czech Academy of Sciences for foreign researchers who are interested in Czech literature. The visiting fellowship is intended for two- or four-week stays. More details can be found at: <https://www.ucl.cas.cz/cs/mezinarodni-spoluprace/stipendium-zdenka-pesata>.

Other Visiting & Exchange Opportunities

The Institute of Czech Literature of the Czech Academy of Science also welcomes students in master's and doctoral programmes at foreign universities to apply for internships in literary and bibliographic research. As our interns, you will gain experience at a respected research institution and discover a supportive environment where you can work on your master's or doctoral theses. We also offer guidance through the process of applying for the funding programmes, e.g. Erasmus+, Visegrad Scholarship Programme, etc. For more details, please visit: <https://www.ucl.cas.cz/en/2013-02-15-12-26-21/professional-internships>.

If you want to become a visiting scholar at the Institute of Czech Literature of the Czech Academy of Sciences, please contact our deputy director for international cooperation, Dr. Michael Wögerbauer (zamini@ucl.cas.cz) to discuss your application.

We preferably accept those applicants whose projects reflect research undertaken at our institute. We specialise in the literary history of the Czech lands (and Central Europe in general) and Czech literary thought from its origins to the present day. Our work focuses on large-scale projects in history, lexicography and literary theory. One essential part of the Institute's work is its role as a national and international information centre in the field. For more information, please visit: <https://www.ucl.cas.cz/en>.

The international cooperation team of the ICL participates in the organization of mobilities within the project Development of Research and Popularisation Resources of the Institute of Czech Literature of the Czech Academy of Sciences, CZ.02.2.69/0.0/0.0/18_054/0014701, co-financed by the European Union.
